14. Army Use of Eniwetok

Mr. Fields said the Army intended to begin testing satellites during the early part of 1958 and had requested permission to use Eniwetok as a launching site. The Commissioners said they wished to cooperate fully in this project and requested the General Manager to offer all possible assistance including the use of Eniwetok. Mr. Strauss said he believed this project was of such importance that it would warrant delay or interference with the scheduled weapons tests (Operation HARDTACK) if this should be necessary in order to accommodate the satellite project.
